2016 ISSA World Congress of Sociology of Sport in Budapest

From June 8-11, 2016 the International Sociology of Sport Association (ISSA) will hold its World Congress in Budapest, Hungary at the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. The local Organizing Committee – a collaboration of Hungarian academics working at St John’s University (New York, USA), the University of Physical Education (Budapest, Hungary) and Bell & Partners Communication – is honored to organize this event, which will have the theme “Sport, Global Development, and Social Change.”

This congress is organized with the support of the Ministry of Human Development and the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. Visit: https://www.eiseverywhere.com//ehome/134264 or http://issa1965.org for more details about and to register for the 2016 Congress.

ISSA 2016 Theme: Sport, Global Development, and Social Change
Sport has become an important vehicle for initiatives related to global development and social change. Such initiatives range from sport for peace and conflict resolution, the advancement of girls and women in sport and physical activity, and the use of sport for economic development. With respect to the latter international sport federations and governing bodies have awarded hosting rights to host a range of sport mega-events to both established and emerging markets. The rationale is that sport and sporting mega-events play a positive role in both social and economic development often through what are popularly referred to as ‘legacy’ programs. However, some critics argue that as a result of these policies nations spend valuable resources on sporting events instead of education, health, or social programs. Scheduled one year after the 2015 Rugby World Cup hosted by the U.K., the FIFA Women’s World Cup hosted by Canada, the 2015 Handball Men’s World Championship hosted by Qatar, in the year of the 2016 Rio Olympics, one year prior to the 2017 FINA World Championship in Budapest (Hungary), and 2 years prior to the 2018 FIFA World Cup in Russia this congress will provide a forum for scholars to discuss and debate these important issues. Beyond the main theme, the congress will also feature a diverse range of sessions to enable scholars, including postgraduate students, the opportunity to share their latest research.

International Review for the Sociology of Sport

Call for Research Articles

The IRSS continues to solicit diverse research articles seated in the sociology of sport, broadly defined, which shed light on social and cultural understandings of sport. Interdisciplinary, inclusive, and global, the IRSS is the journal of the International Sociology of Sport Association and is published in partnership with SAGE Publications. Please visit the journal website for more information about its Aims & Scope, the Editorial Board, manuscript submission guidelines, and sample issues at http://irs.sagepub.com/.

Beginning with 2015 to mark its 50th year of publication, the IRSS publishes eight issues each year and has expanded to 1024 annual pages. To help expedite the review and publication process, the IRSS uses the SAGE Track online manuscript submission site powered by ScholarOne Manuscripts. Scholars submitting manuscripts for consideration can expect a prompt double-blind review process that draws on the expertise of a diverse editorial board and a worldwide network over 2000 expert area scholars. When combined with the SAGE OnlineFirst publication program that makes accepted manuscripts available to scholars within weeks of acceptance, the IRSS has the ability to get scholarly work promptly disseminated to international audiences.

Under the guidance of Editor-in-Chief Lawrence Wenner, the IRSS has seven distinguished Corresponding Editors from across the globe available for consultation and a 40-member international Editorial Board. Articles considered by the IRSS include standard-length research articles as well as shorter research articles. The IRSS aims to be an open and attractive place for the prompt publication of research aimed at the international community. The IRSS editorial team looks forward to having the opportunity to consider your work. Manuscripts may be submitted at http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/irss.

Call for Book and Media Reviews

In addition to research articles, the IRSS encourages reviews of individual books and media works and considers integrative review essays of multiple works. Authors wishing to review books or media (films, videos, interactive media) for the IRSS should contact Dr. David Leonard, Washington State University, Comparative Ethnic Studies, PO Box 644010, Pullman, WA 99164-4010. Tel: (+1) 509 335-6854. Email: djl@wsu.edu

Reviews of books or media provide a scholarly assessment of key works that may advance understanding of sport in social and cultural contexts. Reviews that provide an assessment of one work by a single reviewer are normally of 1500-2000 words in length, inclusive of references, notes, tables, and figures. Reviews that provide a comparative assessment of more than one work or an assessment of one work by multiple reviewers are more substantial integrative essays and are normally of 2000-3000 words in length, inclusive of references, notes, tables, and figures. IRSS accepts book or media review essays comparing 2 or 3 items on one topic and written by a single author as well as book or media review symposia in which the same item is reviewed by 2 or 3 different reviewers. Reviews do not require an abstract or key words.

Book or Media Reviews should contain a heading that includes the Book or Media Title, Author, Publisher’s Name and Location, Date of Publication, Number of Pages, ISBN Number (and, if appropriate) eBook Number. First Olympic Studies Conference in Africa to be held at University of Johannesburg

South Africa has increasingly become a leader in Africa by hosting mega-events like the 2010 FIFA World Cup, various international championships and the 2022 Commonwealth Games. The time has also come to get renowned scholars around the world to debate global legacy issues relevant to the country and continent. Sport has become a global force with far-reaching ripples of impact.
“Competitive and social sports participation improves health. Our diverse communities benefit when children, youth and adults build trust and respect through regular fair play on the field - which was the founding idea of the Olympic Games,” says Prof Yoga Coopoo, Professor of Sport Science and Biokinetics at UJ.

To make it possible for the majority of ordinary people to regularly participate in sport, well-managed facilities, coaching and equipment need to be widely accessible. “The reality is that most people in Africa live too far from sporting facilities and have little access to equipment as simple as running shoes or soccer balls. The sports coaching necessary to progress injury-free to the next level is something very few experience,” says Prof Cora Burnett, Director of the UJ OSC.

“We need to take into account what has worked for sport development in developed countries, but ultimately producing training programmes and facilities that work sustainably for the people they are meant to serve,” she says.

Such sentiments are captured by the Sustainable Development Goals and propagated by global players, corporates, development agencies and the government sector. What can these diverse stakeholders learn from new developments in the field? The topic of ‘The Olympic Movement in Africa’ will be one of the themes explored at the first Olympic Studies Conference held in Africa at the end of November.

The Olympic Studies Centre (OSC) at the University of Johannesburg (UJ) in collaboration with the German Sport University Cologne (GSUC) will host an international conference on Historical and Contemporary Issues in Olympic Studies from Monday 30 November 2015 to Wednesday 2 December 2015 at the UJ Bunting Road Campus in Auckland Park in Johannesburg. The UJ OSC is the first Olympic Studies Centre in Africa designated by the International Olympic Centre (IOC) that has been established in partnership with the German Sport University of Cologne (GSUC or Deutsche Sporthochschule Köln). The conference creates collaboration and networking opportunities for African, SADC and Africa Games Region Five sport stakeholders in sport development, sport for development and Olympic Studies.

Speakers at the Olympic Studies conference include:

- Dr Sam Ramsamy, International Olympic Committee (IOC) member in South Africa and Patron of the UJ Olympic Studies Centre.
- Professor Stephan Wassong, Academic Director of the Olympic Studies Centre, German Sport University Cologne.
- Mr Gideon Sam, President of the South African Sports Confederation and Olympic Committee (SASCOC).
- Professor Ian Culpan, Director of Research in the School of Sport and Physical Education at the University of Canterbury, New Zealand

2nd Commonwealth Conference on Youth Work in SA
The Government of the Republic of South Africa, in partnership with the Commonwealth Secretariat, University of South Africa (UNISA), and the National Youth Development Agency (NYDA) of South Africa is hosting the 2nd Commonwealth Conference on Youth Work (CCYW). The CCYW's theme is 'Engaging Young People in Nation Building: The Youth Worker's Role.' This theme was selected to re-examine the role of youth work practitioners and academics in engaging young people in the development of their countries
  • See more at: http://thecommonwealth.org/media/event/ccyw#sthash.EoLmgTfd.dpuf

Objectives of the CCYW
  • Encourage the creation and sharing of knowledge around youth work theory and practice,
  • Accelerate the recognition of, and investment in, youth work as a profession,
  • Profile the youth worker’s role in mobilizing young people as change agents and contributors to nation building, and
  • Facilitate the establishment of a Commonwealth Alliance of Youth Workers’ Associations.

Who is the CCYW for?
In keeping with the Commonwealth’s strategic focus of supporting the professionalisation of the youth work sector, the CCYW caters to practicing youth workers including representatives of youth work associations, youth work managers, policy makers focusing on youth development and empowerment, academics teaching in the area of youth work practice, and young people active as peer youth workers. As the Commonwealth is also striving to find avenues where youth work intersects with other non-youth-focused sectors, practitioners and academics in other disciplines whose work engages or benefits youth, and has youth work elements, are also welcome. If you think you fit the bill, you should consider registering as an International or South African delegate.

CALL FOR PAPERS

‘Sport, Technoscience, Medicine and Performance’

4S/EASST 2016 Conference: Science and Technology by Other Means

Barcelona International Convention Centre

August 31st - September 3rd 2016
Deadline for submissions: February 21st 2016

We invite abstracts that examine issues relating to sport, technoscience, medicine and performance with a specific focus on science and technology aspects. Presentations/ papers will be considered for a proposal for a journal special issue.

Sport, Technoscience, Medicine and Performance

The scientisation and biologisation of sport raises many issues for STS. Sports are the site of extraordinary human endeavour, massive global operations and enormous social, personal, cultural and moral significance for consumers, practitioners and followers. Processes of industrialisation and marketisation encourage elite athletes to embrace extreme pressures, many addressed in sports science, sports medicine and biological sciences not only to diagnose, rehabilitate and prevent injury but also to push the body to maximum capacity, and to enhance performance. 'Sports science', advanced measurement and imaging technologies, nutritional science, molecular diagnostics, informatics, and more, are applied to these goals and also to game and competition strategy and sports' infrastructures. Genetics/genomics promises contentious possibilities for athlete selection, targeting and training. Developments such as the 'biological passport' highlight issues of governance, normativity and embodiment. The evidence-base for therapeutic and performance enhancement developments is limited, raising significant social, ethical and political questions regarding long term athlete welfare, structures of professional responsibility, evidence-based practice, and the requirements for, and potential limitations of, regulatory mechanisms.

The track invites proposals including but not limited to: shaping the athlete's body; prosthetic technology and 'disability sports'; technological advancement regulations and governance frameworks; amateur performance self-monitoring; athlete health and welfare; networks of scientific /medical sport advice; publics' engagement with sport medical science; materiality of sports equipment; sci-tech aspects of historical emergence of sporting practices; relationship of sci-tech to medical reasoning, and to sports law, ethics and regulation; cultural, societal and organisational variations; data secrecy/transparency; media representation.

Track organisers: Alex Faulkner, Jennifer Hardes and Catherine Coveney. Please contact one of us direct if you would like to discuss your proposal before submission: a.faulkner@sussex.ac.uk, jennifer.hardes@canterbury.ac.uk

CALL FOR SESSION PROPOSALS

North American Society for the Sociology of Sport
La Sociedad Norteamericana para la Sociologia del Deporte
Societe Nord-Americaine de Sociologie du Sport

The 2016 Annual Conference for the North American Society for the Sociology of Sport will be held, November 2 – 5, in Tampa Bay, Florida at the Hilton Tampa Downtown.

The Conference Program Committee would like to invite proposals for session topics.

Conference Theme: Publicly Engaged Sociology of Sport

Inspired by recent momentous cultural events, the conference theme questions and considers the role of sport sociology and sport sociologists in public engagement. In the context of growing economic inequality, we see public money being siphoned into private stadiums within professional sport, corruption within international sporting organizations, and U.S. college coaches being the highest paid employees in state institutions within ‘amateur’ sport. In a time of continued and deadly racial violence, sport remains segregated and stratified in terms of sports, positions, and particularly in terms of positions of power. Even as girls and women demonstrate unflagging interest in sport in all levels and types, they are still recognized primarily for how they look rather than for what they can accomplish. We have witnessed marriage equality for all people in the United States and many places around the world, regardless of sexuality, yet ‘out’ gay male athletes remain rare in the highest levels of sport. We watch technology transform the athletic possibilities of those with a variety of physical impairments; at the same time that access to sport participation remains a barrier. Importantly, as we know, none of these brief examples work in isolation of the others. The clear, and also submerged, intersections offer fruitful examinations in much of the work that we do within our field. As Don Sabo (1995) noted in his NASSS presidential address, “Sport sociologists from the political left to the political right are embroiled by the politics of knowledge construction, and our myriad identities as theorists and researchers bring us closer to, or push us further from, the concerns and needs of community” (p. 248). Thus, what is our role beyond the study of sport? Who should be responsible for public engagement? How do we do it?

While much of our work becomes public through publication or presentation, how accessible is our work, both in terms of the language we use and where our work appears? How civically and politically engaged are we in our various publics? How much does our work inform public policies? Are our voices being heard through the media outlets from which most people gain their information? What are our moral obligations? As journalist Dave Zirin (2008) argued, in “Calling Sport Sociology off the Bench,” “The athletic industrial complex keeps throwing pitch after juicy pitch down the middle of the plate. It’s time for sports sociologists to get the bats off their shoulders and begin to shape debates within the sports world.”

In keeping with the conference theme, sessions may highlight examples of successful public engagement or areas where we might more fruitfully expand our reach. Examples of publicly engaged sociology of sport include many different approaches, such as: activism, sport for peace and development, social work, critical coaching, critical pedagogy, centers (e.g. for the sociological study of sport or for influencing public policy), engagement with the media, self authored media (e.g. blogging), and others. Session organizers are welcome to engage the theme in creative and innovative ways. This call will generate session topics for conference participants to choose from during the Call for Abstracts in April. Session organizers for included sessions are responsible for accepting or declining participants to their sessions.

Session Formats

Proposed session topics are due April 1, 2016. Please note the following different format options:

- Traditional paper presentation sessions (4 - 5 papers per session). These sessions will be open to submissions of well developed research during the call for paper abstracts.

- Completed paper presentation sessions, whereby the entire session is pre-constituted (4 - 5 already selected papers fitting with the session topic). For these sessions, include the name, institutional affiliation, and title of each presenter along with the session abstract. The individual paper abstracts for these sessions will be due at the same time as other abstracts. These sessions can also include a commentator, who should be listed in the session proposal.

- Panel sessions, with a focused theme to be addressed by a panel of discussants. Session organizers should include the names and institutional affiliations of panel members along with the session abstract.

- Roundtable sessions, which can include less developed, preliminary or exploratory research. These sessions can include 4 - 5 presenters for 5 minute introductions of research, followed by discussion among those presenting and conference attendees who join the roundtable. These sessions can be open for abstract submissions or can be pre-constituted. Pre-constituted sessions should include the names and institutional affiliations of all presenters. Abstracts for pre-constituted sessions will be due at the same time as all other abstracts.
All session proposals must include the name, institutional affiliation, and email address of the session organizer; a title (10 words maximum); and a brief abstract (150 words maximum) that describes the session and ideally how the session fits into the conference theme. Indicate which type of session you are submitting for consideration. For pre-constituted sessions, include the names, titles and institutional affiliations of the presenters in the session.
